

The Australian Government and industry research organisations have invested $2.25 million into research and development of methane capture and use technology in the Australian intensive livestock industries.

A major research project is being implemented to identify the elements of a methane capture and use system suitable for operation in a carbon constrained economy.